Recent Advances in Imaging Science

G. C. Papanicolaou[1]

Abstract: I will review briefly the evolution of imaging as an interdisciplinary science with roots in several mathematical areas such as differential equations, geometry, probability, statistics, optimization, etc. I will then present some recent results where certain types of optimization methods appear to be particularly effective in imaging.

[1] Department of Mathematics
Gomal Stanford University
Stanford CA 94305, USA
papanico@math.stanford.edu